Instructors are Military Experts

Of the nearly 20 million living Veterans of the United States Armed Forces, a large portion of these individuals and their families have unique healthcare needs.

At Ohio University's College of Health Sciences and Professions, we offer a graduate-level Veterans Health Certificate, which focuses on providing students and/or post-professional health and healthcare workers with advanced and specific knowledge who want to work, or already work, with Veterans. As many Veterans are utilizing medical care provided by Veterans Administration community clinics, the demand for healthcare workers is crucial, and knowledge of our military's history, culture and aftereffect is imperative.

Curriculum topics include United States military history and culture as it pertains to the individual's health, the Veteran's Affairs system and common and current medical conditions associated with the military service.

At Ohio University's College of Health Sciences and Professions, you can obtain your Veterans Health Certificate at an affordable cost and 100% online, while gaining greater insight and perspective into this special population.
